Surveys design through historical, ideological, stylistic, and technological contexts, examining design’s relationship to significant political, philosophical, and cultural events. While the primary focus of the course is graphic design, lectures will span myriad disciplines including architecture, textile design, fashion design, interior design, product design, and fine art.